“If you want to change the world, it is necessary to be a good person, but hardly enough. You must also change the institutionalised structures that have caused, and that continue to create social and economic deprivations. Gandhi’s My Experiments with Truth was a deep mission. He believed that, not only feelings in the heart, but ideas embedded in the mind must be examined and changed too to make the world more just.

Gandhi the Eternal Leader

The perception of Gandhi in most people's minds is the towering idea of the Mahatma (great soul), who powered India to freedom through non-violence.

Gandhi was the ultimate leader. He had the ability to inspire others to action and to greatness, develop a band of people, who would go well beyond the call of duty.

Gandhi had a clear vision and purpose, and it manifested in all he did. The success of a simple life metaphor - salt, leading to the Dandi March, more than established his capability as a brilliant strategist.

Gandhi operated on values and principles, which were non-negotiable. He was able to marry high ethical values along with brilliant strategy, and then walk the talk, always leading from the front.

Design Principle

Our intention is to provide an experience that has its origins in Gandhi's own evolution as a human being, and as a great leader. This is not intended to mimic Gandhi's own growth, but using it as a backdrop, to look deeply into yourself, and find your own answers.

The intention, at the same time, is to imbibe Gandhi's spirit, to be inspired in completing some of Gandhi's unfinished business.

Gandhi's experiments with truth was his own journey in discovering his own divinity, his life's purpose, and on finding his path, he generated those values and principles that enabled him to live, work, act from that divinity.

Our intention is for you to go through a similar experience, in an accelerated manner.

Transformation & Seva

Deeply inspired by Gandhi's own leadership and life, here are the key takeaways from this fellowship.

Transformation – becoming zero or near zero ego, cleaning the past, transforming all close relationships, looking deeply within, finding one's own truth

Experiential learning of Gandhi as an extraordinary human being and a leader. Hands-on working with the community on the ground, to truly get “seva” or true service, and empathy for one's fellow beings.

A deeper understanding of Gandhi's life and work, that will generate one's own version of a Gandhian way of being. An opportunity to take on Gandhi's unfinished business that resonates and make it a reality.

Fellowship Design

An incredible immersive journey of 8 days combining experiential learning through visits that bring alive Gandhi's life, philosophy and values, role plays, peer learning and tête-à-têtes with Gandhians, transformational sessions that allow each one to go within & emerge in their greatness and contemplative sojourns providing the space for insights and realisations to emerge.

The Fellows go back into their world, and work on themselves, their relationships, their work front and an ambitious project that they choose, as Gandhi's unfinished business. They return 9 months later, and are then trained on how to take this project to the next level, perhaps as a movement.
